GOTHAM WELCOMES FLYERS

CROWDS NEARLY MOB
OCEAN CONQUERORS
UPON SAFE ARRIVAL

Will Honor Crew At Quieter Reception At City Hall

NEW YORK, June 27.—Elated over their successful flight from Ireland to New York, even though forced to make one stop at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Major Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions of the Southern Cross rested at their hotel here this morning in preparation for the official greeting which the city of New York was to extend to them at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

It was to be a comparatively quiet reception, lacking the pomp and burrah of the Broadway parades that have turned out for Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlin and other celebrities. At the request of the flyers—modest men, all of them—the harbor pageant, the triumphal procession up Broadway and other ostentations have been eliminated from the program.

Instead the handsome Kingsford-Smith, who has flown over two oceans, his navigator, Captain J. Patrick Saul, who was loaned to the flyers by the Irish Free State air force, his copilot, the sharp-featured Evert Van Dyk who was recruited from the Dutch East Indies flying service and the courageous radio operator, J. W. Stannage, a baldish South African, will be driven from the Hotel Roosevelt to City Hall where they will receive medals and the city's scroll of honor from Mayor James J. Walker.

Undoubtedly, however, there will be thousands of people on the streets as they motor to City Hall, and they are certain to come in for more ovations, such as they received when they landed at Roosevelt Field at 7:30 o'clock last night. After the City Hall ceremonies they all will be the guests of the Advertising Club at a luncheon.

Major Kingsford-Smith and his companions will long remember the wild reception they received at the hands of the 10,000 spectators who assembled at Roosevelt Field and welcomed them last evening. The crowd broke through the police lines and almost mobbed the trans-Atlantic flyers. In the excitement, the reception committee, headed by Grover A. Whalen, and including Sir Ronald Lindsey, the British ambassador, was swept aside and almost trampled down. It was one of the most unruly crowds that ever witnessed a landing of a famous ship at Roosevelt Field.

Many of the 300 special police were bowled to one side by the throng that broke through the ropes and rushed to acclaim Kingsford-Smith and his three companions. Hats were lost and clothes were torn in the melee. It was a near riot. The crowd was so unmanageable that Kingsford-Smith and his crew did not dare leave their ship for twenty minutes after it landed.

When they did leave their plane they were almost trampled down by the cordial, albeit decidedly disorderly mob. It took the police almost half an hour to get them from the hands of the crowd. And when this was accomplished Kingsford-Smith was able to tell newspapermen his reactions to his hop from Ireland across the Atlantic.

"It was a tough job, and one which we got out of luckily," he said ruefully. "I'm disappointed naturally, that we didn't make New York without a stop, but I believe if we were to try it again we would make a better job out of it. We learned a few things."

Major Kingsford-Smith attributed the success of the east-to-west flight over the North Atlantic to "careful preparations."

"My next flight will be to get married," said Kingsford-Smith, in response to another question. He declared that in two or three days he expected to head westward for Oakland, Calif., in the Southern Cross to complete the ship's tour of the world.

Then he is going to Melbourne, Australia, where he will be married to Miss Mary Powell in September. He will make the trip from the Pacific coast to Australia by boat.

The radio operator, Stannage, said he would not have missed the "thrill" of the trans-Atlantic flight "for anything in the world."

FOUR KILLED WHEN TOURIST CAR OF TRAIN PLUNGES INTO RIVER

Twenty-One Others Injured According To Meagre Word Received; Toronto-Bound Train Hurlled From Rails

TORONTO, June 27.—Four persons were killed and twenty-one were injured when a tourist car attached to train number 4 of the Canadian National Railways plunged into the Vermilion River near Sudbury, according to the first word received here today from the scene of the accident.

It is understood the entire train was derailed, last night. The train was enroute to Toronto.

Details were lacking because wires were downed by an electrical storm. Rescue crews were immediately dispatched to the Vermilion River bridge west of Capreol where the accident occurred.

A relief train carrying doctors and nurses was dispatched to the scene immediately and the train returned to Capreol with a number of injured passengers. Wrecking crews began the work of lifting the sunken passenger coach and placing the other derailed coaches back on the track.

An early investigation failed to reveal the cause of the derailment which hurled the entire train from the track with the exception of the engine. The first news of the wreck was carried to Capreol by the engineer who sped there in the locomotive.

The train was enroute to Toronto.

ATTORNEY IN STEEL MERGER CASE KILLS SELF EARLY FRIDAY

DRUG-HABIT FOE IS CALLED

PITTSBURGH, June 27.—Congressman Stephen G. Porter, leader in the fight to control worldwide distribution of habit-forming drugs, died early today in Allegheny General Hospital here.

PLAN EXECUTION OF CLEVELAND SLAYER

COLUMBUS, O., June 27.—While George Williams, 68, Cleveland slayer and gunman, steadfastly insisted that he wouldn't die in "nobody's electric chair," preparations today were being made for his execution at Ohio Penitentiary sometime Saturday. Williams, unless executive clemency is forthcoming, is to pay the supreme penalty for the slaying of Carl Sherman, a Cleveland policeman.

Leroy Manchester Ends Life Just Before Trial Opening

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 27.—Leroy A. Manchester, general counsel for the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, shot and killed himself here today, according to police.

The suicide occurred just a few minutes before Manchester was scheduled to appear in common pleas court here as an attorney for his concern in the "billion-dollar lawsuit" over the merger of the Sheet and Tube Company with Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The tragedy abruptly interrupted the trial of the "billion dollar suit" over the merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. with Bethlehem Steel Corp., since Manchester was chief of the Sheet and Tube legal staff.

Manchester had been closely identified with the activities of his company in the famous merger since it opened early in the year. The heavier part of the legal negotiations for both the merger and the resulting battle over his consummation had fallen upon his shoulders.

Overwork and mental strain suffered in the stupendous task of fighting the "billion-dollar merger lawsuit" were believed to have been responsible for Manchester's act.

Close friends of Manchester declared they had noticed him acting strangely for the past month. He seemed depressed and overworked, they said. He had planned to retire to a private practice following the conclusion of the merger trial.

Manchester, who was 47 years of age, was in his private office in the Stambaugh building when he committed suicide. He fired two shots into his head, dying almost instantly. Associates of the attorney who were in an adjoining office rushed immediately to his side.

James A. Campbell, 76-year-old chairman of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company who is a veteran of many a steel industrial war, was scheduled to take the witness stand in common pleas court here today to undergo prolonged cross-examination when the trial was interrupted.

The reading of voluminous correspondence relative to the merger consumed yesterday's entire session. Thirty-four letters, exchanged by officials of Sheet and Tube and members of the anti-merger committee, were placed in the record.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT FACES CHANGE

Government Plans New Deployment Of Its Forces

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Again Uncle Sam is preparing for a new deployment of the tremendous forces of his government against the rum ring, after eleven years of effort and reconnaissance during which has grown probably the world's most difficult law-enforcement problem.

Today next the responsibility of enforcing the prohibition laws will be with the justice department instead of the treasury. Today Secretary Mellon was completing the details of handing over the job to Attorney General Mitchell.

Clearly the latter was apprehensive, judging from this statement, that "in those states which have repealed enforcement statutes and whose authorities do not perform a proper share of the work, there have been, and will continue to be, grave deficiencies in enforcement."

A field force of 198 officials, twelve administrators, twelve permit supervisors, eighty-seven enforcement chiefs in each judicial district, and the same number of permissive experts, will begin to function July 1.

The setup is along judicial circuit lines, entirely different from the prohibition district boundaries of the past. The first organization was along state lines, and that existed until General Lincoln C. Andrews, once chief of the A. E. F. military police, was "called" to build a real prohibition army.

Enforcement districts were then created so each in a general way would take in territory through which the same problems existed—such as smuggling along the coast and borders, alcohol diversions in industrial centers, and moonshining in the South.

Bootlegging has flourished under each of these past setups and in the words of one prominent enforcement official the administration of the law "is becoming increasingly difficult."

What will happen under the new arrangement is a matter for the future. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman expressed the opinion that with detection and prosecution in the same department a higher degree of efficiency could be obtained. In remarking on the plan of Mitchell to obtain greater state co-operation Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran declared that no better man could be obtained to carry out this policy than Colonel A. W. Woodcock, of Maryland, who was selected as enforcement director.

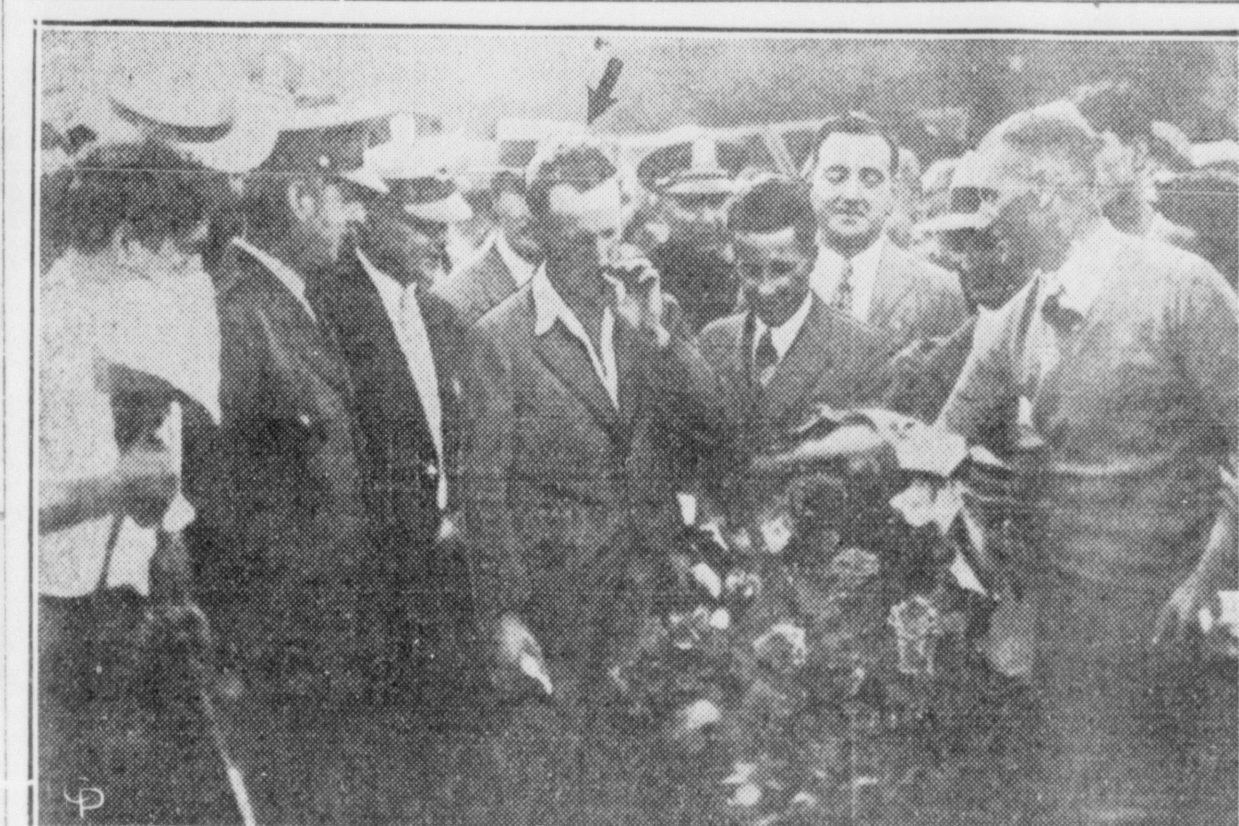

Mitchell declared that states, along with the federal government, have a moral obligation to enforce the eighteenth amendment, but he added that "there is no legal way of compelling state legislatures to enact enforcement statutes, or to compel state authorities to aid in the enforcement, just as there would be no legal way of compelling congress to enact enforcement legislation if it chose not to."

This was interpreted to mean that in the last analysis prohibition enforcement under the new regime would be governed by public opinion.

LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION MADE TARGET OF ATTACKS

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The future of President Hoover's law enforcement commission was under debate in the senate today with a strong faction of wets and dries seeking to confine its activities to the prohibition problem and to force from it an early report on what must be done to enforce the eighteenth amendment.

TRANSATLANTIC FLYERS GREETED IN NEW YORK

GUNMAN SLAIN WHEN BOOTLEG FEUD RENEWED

Alleged Bootlegger "Put On Spot" In Cleveland

CLEVELAND, June 27.—Bootleg warfare broke out anew with bloodshed here early today when Charles G. Velotta, 29, said to have had a criminal record dating from his eleventh birthday anniversary was "put on the spot" at Mayfield Road S. E. and East 125th St. and slain at the point of gangland shotguns.

The murder occurred just ten minutes after a police radio cruiser squad passed the corner. Members of the squad said they recognized Velotta standing on the corner talking to two men, both of whom are sought for questioning.

Residents in the vicinity said they saw a green sedan with wire wheels speeding away a few minutes after the outbreak of gunfire. Velotta's bleeding body was seen crumpling on the sidewalk.

A round-up of the city's hoodlums, gangsters, bootleggers and members of the underworld was begun immediately by police. Four suspects were arrested shortly after the murder. They were taken to the police station for questioning.

Velotta was unconscious when found by police. His body was bleeding profusely. Slugs had perforated his body and a hole was torn through his head. The victim died an hour after he was admitted to a hospital without regaining consciousness. He left police with no clues as to the identity of his slayer, or slayers.

Police expressed the belief that Velotta may have known too much about East Side bootlegging activities. Associates of the man were known to have been involved in liquor running, it was said.

HOME RULE LIQUOR PLAN SUGGESTED

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Amendment of the eighteenth amendment to give states "home rule" on the liquor question was proposed in a resolution which was introduced in the house by Representative Bacon (R) of New York.

The resolution follows the plan advocated by Ambassador Dwight Morrow in his successful campaign for the Republican senatorial nomination in New Jersey.

RETAIL MERCHANTS TO FORM TRAFFIC POLICY

Commission Invites Business Men To Plan System

Formulation of a policy designed to alleviate Xenia's traffic problems, particularly on Saturdays when the congestion in the business district is the greatest, has been left entirely to the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association by city commission.

At the invitation of Dr. F. M. Chambliss, president of the commission, the business men of the city will draw up a plan to solve the traffic situation and present it to the commission.

This course was decided upon at the bi-monthly commission meeting Thursday night when Frederick Anderson, as secretary of the merchants' organization, was instructed to introduce the question at the association's meeting next Monday.

Commissioners H. L. Binder and Jacob Kazy expressed their intention of attending the meeting and it is probable that several other city officials will also be present.

Dilver Belden, auto club secretary, also present at the commission meeting, made public the result of an analysis of the parking situation in Xenia last Saturday night when for one hour the police checked the license numbers of all autos parked in the business section in two squares in each direction from the Main and Detroit St. intersection and turned this data over to the auto club.

The survey disclosed that of a total of 407 machines parked in this area, 169 were owned by Xenia residents, 163 belonged to rural owners and seventy-five were owned by residents of villages in Greene County and cities outside this county.

DRILL BOAT IS DEMOLISHED; RESCUE ELEVEN

Victims Blown Into Bits As Lightning Hits Dynamite

BROCKVILLE, Ont., June 27.—A lightning bolt from thunder and cloud-ridden skies today had wrought the deaths of thirty-two men, sent eleven others to a local hospital where they are recovering from their unparalleled experience and completely demolished a large drill scow.

A blinding flash, a deep roar as if the thunder itself had swept down into the St. Lawrence River and then a dense black cloud of smoke and the drill boat, "John B. King" was blown to bits in one gigantic explosion.

Forty-three men were aboard the ill-fated craft when the lightning, coming with a sharp thunder storm, struck the drills, ran down the steel braces and set off tons of dynamite in the shoals directly under the boat.

Bodies were tossed up into the air like small chips of wood. They were broken and mangled. Many never will be found. Eleven of the crew were rescued from the wind-churned waters of the narrows, which was dotted with bits of wreckage.

The death toll probably would have been greater if the United States Coast Guard cutter, C. G. 211, with Commander R. M. Rasmussen, of the lower Great Lakes district aboard, had not been hovering near. The boat dove to and picked up the eleven survivors, who were clinging to planks and other buoyant pieces of debris.

Other Coast Guard cruisers and river craft slowly pried back and forth across the scene today in a search for bodies while the Canadian government launched its official investigation.

R. A. McNeil, a foreman, said the explosion sank the boat immediately and that he felt the blast and then found himself struggling in the river. The boat disappeared as if by magic and a few minutes after the explosion only bits of wreckage remained, he said.

MILITARY COUNCIL CONTROLS BOLIVIA MANIFESTO CLAIMS

Regiment Deposes Government; Will Form Parties

BUENOS AIRES, June 27.—A manifesto issued by the Bolivian Camacho regiment at La Paz said that the government of Bolivia today was in the hands of a military "council of six" according to dispatches received from Chile.

The manifesto said that the government had been deposed because it was unconstitutional and said that the "council of six" would guide the destinies of the nation until political parties have been reorganized. The council would be prepared to resign after a plebiscite has been held to elect a president to take the post vacated by Hernando Siles who resigned the presidency several weeks ago.

The rebel forces had been swelled by the support of the entire Bolivian army with the exception of two regiments which remained loyal.

Official dispatches, heavily censored, gave little information about the revolutionary movement which other dispatches declared had spread through Bolivia.

A Bolivian radio message intercepted by an Argentine station yesterday said that eighty had been killed in a battle between troops and revolutionists forty-five miles outside La Paz.

Official dispatches contained an admission that one regiment of the army had joined the subversive movement, taking possession of Oruro, capital of the department of Oruro, about 137 miles southeast of La Paz.

Travelers arriving here from La Paz said that the Bolivian capital was under martial law when they left there Tuesday with troops patrolling the streets and machine guns commanding the principal thoroughfares.

EARTH TREMOR FELT IN OHIO

LIMA, O., June 27.—An earth tremor which was felt within a radius of thirty-five miles occurred here at 3:55 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

No damage was done but many small buildings were slightly shaken by the tremor. The shock lasted only a few minutes and is believed to have caused a subterranean rock slide.

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

READ THIS FIRST:

Clara Dee Forester is a millionaire's daughter who is killed but one dollar. She goes to Mrs. Flynn's boarding house to live, and there meets Winfield Baxter, a young chemist, who falls in love with her. Estelle Kay persuades her to model for the famous artist, Ivan Moreau, who also pays her marked attention. Estelle is jealous and threatens her. Ivan traps her in the studio, and in defending herself she threatens to shoot him. Just as she falls down stairs and hears a shot and a scream. Winfield disappears, they hunt for the murderer of Ivan Moreau.

The papers announce a valuable scientific discovery of Winfield's. Clara Dee is heartbroken at his desertion of her.

Clara Dee is arrested, jailed and indicted for first degree murder. They prepare for her trial. Clara Dee, somehow, endures the long day of testimony and grueling questions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXVI

The prosecuting attorney continued: "The defense says that this man was a beast—destroyer of women's virtue. If he was such a man, why did all of these so-called innocent victims flock to him? Why did they go to his private rooms. I say? Why? I will tell you why. They were gold diggers—lewd women. Women who would do anything to get money for fine clothes. A common rule of the land these days.

"Who was this woman? Just a model? What respect does a woman command who is brazen enough to stand before a man in nature's garb? Would your daughters do that? No, they would not. They are not that kind. Would your daughters go to the private apartments of a man inviting disaster? Again, I say no!

"They would know where they were going and the man's intentions would be apparent. This is not a case of the kind to demand your sympathy." Confidently, he summed up his case.

The judge charged the jury as is customary regarding reasonable doubt, gave his instructions; and they filed out.

Now came an interminable wait. What was taking place, no one knew. Night came. The jury was locked up. Then another day passed—and no agreement. Finally, they were discharged. All stood for acquittal except one man, and he hung out to the last.

Back to prison went Clara Dee. Reporters interviewed the "Gold Digger." He said, "Gold diggers I know them. That smart lawyer couldn't fool me."

During the interminable wait which followed, Clara Dee experienced another phase of suffering—there seemed to be no depth to suffering. One kept sinking deeper, deeper into it. It was unfathomable. The interval before the first trial, she now found had been reasonably bearable. Hope had given her courage; Donley's assurance and professed belief in her innocence had lifted her from the pit of black despair. Now, she had neither. Craig Donley believed her guilty, had counted on that very fact in planning for her defense.

She spent the days—and the terrifying nights—in the shadow of the electric chair. What else could she expect, when the first trial had failed to give her her freedom? She was guilty, indisputably guilty in the eyes of the world. She cringed forlornly in her cell, refusing now to see anyone except her lawyers, even whom she greeted dejectedly, conversed with in a hollow, beaten voice.

Their attempts to secure bail for her met with failure—and she cared little. Of course, no one wanted a murderer at large. She thought she must surely lose all reason—grew to desire it, almost. Anything to escape this torture.

At last, came the day of the second trial, which was a mirrored image of the first. Clara Dee maneuvered that she had lived to participate in it.

And how she dragged through the hours of the three days and nights during which the jury was locked up, only a kinder providence knew, than that which had presided over the events of the first trial, which was an interruption from the jury room, when the chairman asked for instructions. He wanted to know if a verdict of justifiable homicide would free the girl.

When at last the twelve filed back to their places, there was no necessity for the judge to use his gavel to demand order. The silence was oppressive, smothering.

The foreman arose, addressed the judge, the court, solemnly pronounced his verdict.

Clara Dee Forester was acquitted!

Justifiable homicide—free, but guilty in the eyes of all the world! Shackles that would bind her forever to a dragging weight far heavier than the heaviest ball and chain of imprisonment. Free—only through the skill of a clever attorney who had played upon the human emotions of twelve men and women.

For the first time, the thought assailed her that she might after all, be guilty. For, was not the whole tragedy like a horrible dream in her mind? If she had not seen Ivan lock that door, then had not later tried to open it herself—then afterward, found it unlocked? Perhaps that was sufficient evidence that she had been out of her mind at the time! So the new obsession took up its place in her mind and tortured her.

Gregory counseled her gently. "Get some rest, Clara Dee, and forget it all!" He was grateful for her freedom, but recognized its portent. "Get a good hold on yourself, then carry on as if this thing hadn't happened. Come to me or send for me at any time."

He had driven her back to Mrs. Flynn's, where that self-appointed guardian angel put her to bed, labored up the stairs with hot tea and toast and marmalade; and served on her precious flowered china, of which few pieces remained of some mother had brought from Kilkenny. Clara Dee made a brave effort of eating, to reward her kindness.

"I should think you'd be afraid to house a murderer," she observed ironically.

"Hush your foolishness, me dear. And do ye be forgotten! This thing, right here and now. How about that business course you was takin' and that job you as ye'll be gitten as soon as ye get some flesh and color back onto ye?" she beamed, like a mother coaxing a child with the promise of a party.

Clara Dee smiled wanly, and promised to rally to the cause. Well, if she had to live, she couldn't continue to be a burden to Mrs. Flynn.

Would the notoriety of these weeks hound her even into the business world, she wondered? Probably. She would have to suffer that too, then, and make the best of it. She considered changing her name, but decided against it. If the world were determined to vanquish her at every step, that would not save her. Anyone who sought reason to identify her, could easily do so from her pictures in the papers.

A week, she forced herself to activity, helped Mrs. Flynn with all the work, resumed her studies, until she felt the surge of life and ambition again flow through her veins.

Winfield called one evening, demanded her presence in the parlor. Urged by Mrs. Flynn's persuasive words, she went down to see him. The coldness and vastness of the room assumed amazing proportions. She felt that she had never really known the youth who sat opposite her on the red mohair sofa, and crushed his soft hat in his hands while he jerked out halting phrases.

"Why have you refused me the chance of helping you in any way that I might have, Dee?"

"Because it would have been unfair to you and your splendid future to let you waste your time and thoughts on a murderer."

He winced, questioned her with a sudden stare. "But you're not a—"

He winced, questioned her with a sudden stare. "But you're not a—"

"Oh, I don't know! What does it matter? The world thinks I am—you think I am. Perhaps I am. In any event, I am not fit to be the friend of any man, least of all, a man like you. Go back to your work, Win—and I shall go to mine, and try to forget—everything. I may find something to ease the pain a little. What I am or what becomes of me is of no consequence to anyone—except myself."

"But, it is to me! Can't we begin all over again, Dee?"

"No—there can be but one beginning to anything. Why pretend? Will you tell me one thing, Win?"

"Anything you ask."

"Why did you leave here so abruptly on New Year's Eve—with out a word to me? I was not a murderer then—yet—"

He crushed his hat—silent for a moment, then spoke with an effort: "But you were with Moreau. And I wanted so to tell you I had won! I heard—oh! forgive me, I didn't know you were so fine and courageous."

If possible, her face went a shade whiter and she carefully moistened her lips before she spoke: "No, you didn't know—many things. I think that it all, Win. Won't you please go? Good luck to you," she attempted a note of flippancy, rising.

"And you won't be friends, even?"

"What's the use? We live in such different worlds, after all. And you will soon forget me, if you just drop this mask of trying to remain loyal to something that never even existed," she made a fine effort to sound callous, cruel.

He left her, not knowing whether she was right or wrong, whether she ever had cared for him or not, whether he had ever loved her. Anyway, it was over. He must lose himself, and those hauntingly sweet memories, in hard work.

Likewise determined Clara Dee. She was right! He had only acted the role of loyalty for his uncle's sake. Hadn't he deserted her, voluntarily, even before this thing had happened? He was through with her—she had served his purpose while he was exiled from his own kind—as an amusing person with whom to play around, without stepping beyond the bounds of his own class. He had had the advantage, knowing all the time who she was. Hers had been the folly of indiscretion. And, if he did care for her at all, she had no right to encourage him—she, a murderer.

Once more, she armed herself with hope, and started on her quest. In her purse was a new list of employment bureaus. It seemed hardly possible that less than a month had elapsed since that morning—oh, aeons of time ago—when she had been abruptly stopped at this same starting point.

Perseverance Wins

Few diplomas hold more significance for the possessors than the one awarded to Leo Caldwell, Boston, Mass., attorney. For 18 years he attended business administration courses at Boston university to attain the coveted degree.

By FRANK CIPRIANI
Central Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, June 27.—Twas a noble experiment that a tattered beggar, attired in an atrocious frock coat, shiny trousers, and a cap which would have been more becoming to a Parisian Apache, undertook the other day on windswept Michigan avenue. And 'twas a successful one, too.

For the experiment was to test the cultural taste of the Chicago public, to prove the lie to the supposition that the public is concert-conscious simply because of the ballyhoo of famous names and social color.

The tattered beggar who made the experiment was none other than Jacques Gordon, former concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and organizer of the famous Gordon string quartet. His experiment was a curbside concert with a $40,000 Stradivarius once played by the immortal Paganini.

Is It Ballyhoo?

Some time ago the question rose as to whether people attended concerts and recitals because of sheer love of music or because of ballyhoo. Gordon contended that music attracted people past the box office. Others argued that if the great Paderewski were to play in a dance hall, his name unannounced, the crowd would complain about his technique. Gordon, one of the foremost violinists in America, determined to test the matter.

Disguised as a blind man wearing smoked glasses, his clothes rusty and ancient, a cigar box strapped to his belt and bearing the sign "I am blind," the famous violinist sauntered forth on Chicago's aristocratic boulevard.

First came the notes of a Kreisler piece from the $40,000 violin. Perhaps fifteen men and women paused to listen. A few dropped coins into the box. By and by approached a prominent music critic (Herman Devries of the American) who halted a moment to clink a few cents into the box as Gordon, recognizing him, played the critic's favorite aria the "Meditation" from Thaïs. The critic did not recognize the concertmaster, so excellent was Gordon's disguise.

Plays Classical Music

Down the avenue walked the experimenting beggar. He stood on the curbside at the library for half an hour, playing the melodic strains of "Kiss Me Again," Schubert's "Ave Maria," Dria's "Soubrette," and Kreisler's "Liebesfreud." By this time a crowd of seventy had gathered and were listening rapturously to the curbside concert. Dimes and quarters tinkled into the cigar box.

"I am satisfied," declared Gordon after the conclusion of his experiment, "that Chicago will listen to good music whether it's in a concert hall or on a curbside. It is the music, not the ballyhoo that attracts the patrons."

Gordon paused to count his alms collection. It consisted of $1.75 in quarters, $2.50 in dimes, 95 cents in nickels and 41 cents in pennies, a grand total of $5.61 all of which went to St. Vincent's orphan asylum.

Thus Gordon, to prove his contention, gave an outdoor concert for $5.61. His indoor recitals bring $1,000.

OLD-TIMERS SIGH AS TROUGHS PASS

LONDON, O., June 27.—The four once-popular water troughs on a downtown street corner here have gone the way of the horse and buggy, the bootjack, the old-fashioned hired girl and what-not of the days of yesterday.

The famous troughs have been removed by city workmen. The metal bowls were "junked," and the concrete bases were broken up without ceremony, except for an occasional sigh on the part of an old-timer, who recalled the many times that old Dobbin was revived when he halted to partake of a drink of cool water after a long drive.

The troughs were termed "nuisances" by the village council.

Concertmeister Plays Violin On Streets in Disguise; Collects $5.61.

Jacques Gordon on Michigan Boulevard, Chicago.

By FRANK CIPRIANI
Central Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, June 27.—Twas a noble experiment that a tattered beggar, attired in an atrocious frock coat, shiny trousers, and a cap which would have been more becoming to a Parisian Apache, undertook the other day on windswept Michigan avenue. And 'twas a successful one, too.

For the experiment was to test the cultural taste of the Chicago public, to prove the lie to the supposition that the public is concert-conscious simply because of the ballyhoo of famous names and social color.

The tattered beggar who made the experiment was none other than Jacques Gordon, former concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and organizer of the famous Gordon string quartet. His experiment was a curbside concert with a $40,000 Stradivarius once played by the immortal Paganini.

Is It Ballyhoo?

Some time ago the question rose as to whether people attended concerts and recitals because of sheer love of music or because of ballyhoo. Gordon contended that music attracted people past the box office. Others argued that if the great Paderewski were to play in a dance hall, his name unannounced, the crowd would complain about his technique. Gordon, one of the foremost violinists in America, determined to test the matter.

Disguised as a blind man wearing smoked glasses, his clothes rusty and ancient, a cigar box strapped to his belt and bearing the sign "I am blind," the famous violinist sauntered forth on Chicago's aristocratic boulevard.

First came the notes of a Kreisler piece from the $40,000 violin. Perhaps fifteen men and women paused to listen. A few dropped coins into the box. By and by approached a prominent music critic (Herman Devries of the American) who halted a moment to clink a few cents into the box as Gordon, recognizing him, played the critic's favorite aria the "Meditation" from Thaïs. The critic did not recognize the concertmaster, so excellent was Gordon's disguise.

Plays Classical Music

Down the avenue walked the experimenting beggar. He stood on the curbside at the library for half an hour, playing the melodic strains of "Kiss Me Again," Schubert's "Ave Maria," Dria's "Soubrette," and Kreisler's "Liebesfreud." By this time a crowd of seventy had gathered and were listening rapturously to the curbside concert. Dimes and quarters tinkled into the cigar box.

"I am satisfied," declared Gordon after the conclusion of his experiment, "that Chicago will listen to good music whether it's in a concert hall or on a curbside. It is the music, not the ballyhoo that attracts the patrons."

Gordon paused to count his alms collection. It consisted of $1.75 in quarters, $2.50 in dimes, 95 cents in nickels and 41 cents in pennies, a grand total of $5.61 all of which went to St. Vincent's orphan asylum.

Thus Gordon, to prove his contention, gave an outdoor concert for $5.61. His indoor recitals bring $1,000.

OLD-TIMERS SIGH AS TROUGHS PASS

LONDON, O., June 27.—The four once-popular water troughs on a downtown street corner here have gone the way of the horse and buggy, the bootjack, the old-fashioned hired girl and what-not of the days of yesterday.

The famous troughs have been removed by city workmen. The metal bowls were "junked," and the concrete bases were broken up without ceremony, except for an occasional sigh on the part of an old-timer, who recalled the many times that old Dobbin was revived when he halted to partake of a drink of cool water after a long drive.

The troughs were termed "nuisances" by the village council.

T. N. T. CLUB MEETS

The T. N. T. Club met at the home of Mrs. W. D. Drutz, Clifton, Thursday afternoon. Members answered roll call with the names of great poets.

The afternoon was spent in sewing and Alma Brewer gave a demonstration of the correct way to put on a binding.

Misses Ruth Sparrow, Hamilton and Ethel Fremder of Dayton were guests at the meeting. Two new members were added to the roll.

The next meeting hostesses will be Lydia Dalley, Dorothy Stover and Verna Mae Stein.

At the close of the meeting a social time was enjoyed and the hostess committee served a delicious refreshment course.

SEWING CLUB MEETS

The Happy-Go-Lucky Sewing Club met in the sewing room of Central High School, Wednesday afternoon.

After a short business session the afternoon was spent in sewing. A demonstration of how to alter a pattern was given by Florence Andrews. Marguerite Nash was chosen to represent the club at the district camp in July. The next meeting will be held at the same meeting place, Wednesday at 2 o'clock. All members are urged to be present and bring twenty cents to help pay the expenses of the delegate.

YOUTH KILLED WHEN DETECTIVES BREAK UP ARSON ATTEMPT

MIDDLETOWN, O., June 27.—A youth believed to be Sol H. Barnett, 24, of Lockland, O., was shot and killed by police here today when he was surprised in an attempt to set fire to the home of A. P. Peterson, officials said.

Police said that they received a mysterious tip that the house, which is owned by J. C. Clemmons, was to be set afire. Detectives Jess Bennett and John Fitzgerald went to the scene.

About an hour after midnight, the detectives said the youth approached the house, and, after piling rubbish around the rear of the house and saturating it with kerosene, set fire to the dwelling.

Barnett ran and refused to halt at the command of the detectives. When he was some distance from the burning house, Barnett turned and pulled a revolver from his pocket. Both detectives opened fire and the youth fell dead. It could not be determined which of the officers fired the fatal shot.

The fire was quickly extinguished and police found several baskets containing rubbish, a can of kerosene and a package of meat and strychnine.

Police believe the poisoned meat was used to get rid of several dogs in the neighborhood. Five dogs have been poisoned in the past few days.

The house was heavily insured against fire, police said, and an investigation was started immediately.

POLICEMAN FREED OF MURDER CHARGES

LIMA, O., June 27.—Police Inspector George A. Strick is free today from second degree murder charges in connection with the death of a prisoner, Justice Harry J. Bennett freed the official from the charge yesterday when he held that the testimony which was made at the hearing was contradictory and insufficient.

Strick was charged with having caused the death of Harry Clarkson June 5 during an alleged "third degree" session, while police were questioning the prisoner. The prosecution declared that Clarkson was severely injured and died several days later due to an alleged beating.

OPENS EYES ON NEW WORLD

Man Blind Thirty Years Amazed At Sight As Vision Is Restored.

CHICAGO, June 27.—J. F. Fish looked out on a strange and unreal world today after thirty years of darkness.

His vision suddenly restored after three decades of blindness, Fish sat bewildered yesterday by the side of the woman who had been his continuous companion, his wife. She had been but a girl when a sudden blow on the head had robbed him of his eyesight.

On a tour through Chicago's boulevards Fish saw automobiles, airplanes and tall skyscrapers, for the first time.

Fish lost his sight when a tree fell on him in 1899. He spent more than $50,000 in attempts to regain his vision. Meantime, he opened a business college to support himself and his bride.

Then, three decades later, a miracle happened. His sight gradually returned while he was sitting at home, listening to his wife read. Today, speaking of his return to the world of light, Fish stated:

"I was terrified when I saw automobiles rushing by and buildings thrusting up into the skies. I was too wonderful to believe. I had to touch everything to make sure my eyes weren't deceiving me. 'Always I have thought of women wearing bustles and trailing skirts. Men had mustaches and sideburns and the street cars were still the little cable and horse cars I knew.'

"It is wonderful to see. Especially the flowers. All through these years I have kept my sense of color and form and to see flowers again is very beautiful.

"There is beauty, too, about this new city. A sort of terrible grandeur, almost unbelievable.

"This morning, after I started shaving—I have shaved myself throughout all these years—it occurred to me I might as well look at myself in the mirror. My face was fatter than I imagined it, and I hadn't known my hair was gray.

"At breakfast my wife said, 'and do I look old and wrinkled and gray to you?' I said, 'No more than I do.' Of course I had always thought of her as the girl she was when I first lost my sight."

When students and teachers came to his office at the Northwestern Business College now, Fish closes his eyes "in order to recognize them more readily"—because his ears are better trained than his eyes.

Announcing his future plans, he said: "I shall take a vacation soon. I shall travel. I want to see millions of things and people in this country."

WESTERN UNION TO BEGIN USING NEW TERMINAL DEVICE

Effective July 1 the local Western Union Telegraph Company's office will be terminated in a 100 wire Concentration Unit, installed at the Cincinnati relay office, and in which all automatic printer, or Simplex operated offices, working with Cincinnati, will terminate.

The invention, operates like a huge horizontal switchboard divided into sections, having human parts here and there, and was invented to meet the situation created by the installation throughout the country of thousands of Simplex printers. The local office has been operating under the Simplex method since February 19, 1929.

Contact with the relay office is made practically instantaneous by this facility. A large number of 100 wire Concentration Units will be installed in fifty-nine leading cities this year, which is in line with the Western Union's program of conversion from manual to automatic telegraphy.

A turret of 100 lights correspond to a board of 100 direct wire connections before each operator in the unit and into which any operator may plug the connection of her Simplex automatic typewriter. When Xenia has messages to send, the Cincinnati office is signalled and a light corresponding to the Xenia wire flashes on and the signal light of the lowest numbered operator glows. She plugs in and her machine automatically records the message as it is written on a similar machine by the local office operator.

ARREST OFFICIALS AFTER BANK CLOSED DUE TO SPECULATIONS

CINCINNATI, O., June 27.—Two former officials of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks National Bank were under arrest and the bank was closed here today as the result of the alleged stock market activities of Amor W. Shafer, dismissed district manager of Henry L. Doherty and Company.

The Brotherhood Bank failed to open its doors yesterday and Lyman E. Norris, former vice president, and Harry Rosenblum, former cashier, were arrested. Both pleaded not guilty to charges of violating the national banking act and were held in default of $25,000 bond each. The two officials, with Joseph J. Castellini, president, were removed from their positions by the board of directors Monday.

Removal of three officers resulted in the withdrawal of about $1,000,000 by depositors of the bank.

Shafer's alleged speculations were the direct cause of the bank's closing, United States District Attorney Haveth E. Mau said. It is the second Cincinnati banking institution to be closed as the result of Shafer's alleged manipulations. The Cosmopolitan Bank was closed previously.

EXPECT 500 EX-PUPILS HERE FOR ANNUAL REUNION NEXT WEEK

More than 500 former pupils of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans Home are expected to attend the Golden Jubilee reunion of the Association of Ex-Pupils of the institution here Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, July 1, 2 and 3. Back in 1881, at the first reunion held at the Home, 129 young men and women returned to renew acquaintances and friendships, and since that time the number of former pupils attending the annual gathering has grown steadily year after year.

The fiftieth reunion is expected to bring together the largest number of ex-pupils in the history of the association.

State Senator Paul M. Herbert, Columbus, past commander of Franklin Post, No. 1, American Legion, and E. Howard Gilkey, four times president of the Association of Ex-Pupils, will have prominent parts on the program for the banquet which will be held Wednesday night, the second day of the reunion. Dr. George H. Lampe will act as toastmaster.

All past presidents of the association will be especially honored at the Golden Jubilee reunion and all of those still living have been urged to attend if possible.

Present officers of the association are: president emeritus, Edward W. Hughes, Columbus; honorary president, Albert W. Hudson, Dayton; president, George W. Robertson, Columbus; first vice-president, Alpha Brayton Gardner, Lakeside; second vice-president, Ola Irwin Good, Warren, Ind.; recording secretary, Grace Shoreades Snyder, Dayton; corresponding

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HEIRS OF GOD—Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou art not a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.—Gal. 4:6, 7.

ST. OLAF'S DAY

At the end of next month, on July 29 to be exact the people of Norway will celebrate the nine-hundredth anniversary of the violent passing of King Olaf Haraldsson, which took place at the finish of a desperate battle against rebellious subjects at Stikkestad.

This singular honor is not being bestowed on the memory of Olaf because he was a viking and a scrapper and made his mark as a fighting man in a fighting age during the thirty-five years of his strenuous life, for Norway has produced many warriors with Zululike nerve and skill. Olaf is remembered and revered for quite a different reason. It was he who imposed Christianity on Norway after even the great Olaf Trygvesson had failed to do so, for which service he later on received a halo.

It is related, however, that in doing his missionary work, Olaf used methods which were more in accordance with the traditions of his ancestors than in harmony with the ideas of ordinary evangelists of even a rude age. He spent little time in persuasive preaching and emotional singing, preferring to secure his conversions, particularly among the nobles, by methods afterward epitomized in the expression "putting the question."

That may be one reason why Olaf's reign, though highly colored and perpetually remembered, was not very long. The whole of its ups and downs was compressed into about thirteen years. The beginning of it followed the young man's return home to Norway from England, where he had been fighting the Danes for several years. Arriving in the peninsula he declared himself king, secured the help of some petty monarchs, and in 1016, being then 21 years old, mopped up Earl Cveyn, who had been running things, and established his own rule.

Though Olaf was called "the fat" by his contemporaries, he was lean enough to be very active, and in a short time he created a condition more closely approaching a state of national unity than any of his predecessors had ever achieved. He gave the king of Sweden a jolt, married his daughter against her father's will, and raided Denmark. But in 1029 the suppressed nobles found a leader in Knut the Great and Olaf retired perforce to Russia, where he stayed until he returned to fight the battle that meant his finish, and in the estimation of the pious, gave him the crown of a martyr.

FEDERAL JOB

Chicago's acting police commissioner is quoted as stating, after a conference with the federal prohibition administrator for the Chicago area, that in future all liquor arrests will be turned over to the federal authorities for prosecution. Apparently he feels that his department has enough to do in handling crimes of violence.

This announcement has far reaching implications and potentialities; for it is symptomatic of the increasing disposition on the part of local authorities to throw the burden of enforcing national prohibition on the national government. The same trend is observable in the repeal of state enforcement laws, as in New York and Wisconsin. Should Chicago's example be followed by other cities the weight of the load now carried by the federal authorities would be increased; but local police forces would have time to devote to the protection of life and property, which they now spend tipping over blindpits.

There is an unpleasant side to extending the federal police power within the states; but a practical condition has arisen which must be met in a practical way. Whatever merit there may be to the argument that the states are under the same obligation as the federal government to enforce the national prohibition law they will not do it if it interferes with their enforcement of other and more important laws. Chicago illustrates the necessity of choosing between the two things.

MIND CONTROL

Man's greatest handicap is not often what he thinks it is. Taking stock of your own circumstances, you doubtless may point to physical handicaps or certain unfortunate occurrences, and conclude that one thing or another of this sort is your chief handicap. Usually our real handicap is the control which our instincts and emotions have over our lives. Our handicap lies in the failure of the mind—the failure of thinking and judgment to control action. Little by little, as the centuries go on, man brings the mind up to the capacity for control. In that way he eliminates his only real handicap.

THE LIE DETECTOR

University of Chicago professors are interested in a machine invented some time ago, known as the "lie detector." By means of delicate apparatus those changes in breathing, pulse and blood pressure which accompany emotions involving guilt and deception, are recorded. It may or may not work satisfactorily. Liars may beat the machine, but they cannot beat themselves. The lie makes its mark on character. We say, "I won't count this time," but every act is recorded in our personality. We can fool others. We even seem to fool ourselves. Nobody can fool himself. What he does has its inevitable reaction. It changes him. And a multitude of little changes in direction will some day put the whole man in reverse.

MEANER MOTIVES

Somebody has said—it was Sir James M. Barrie—that we ought never to ascribe to others motives meaner than our own. It is easy to condemn another for his act. We say he is doing it for this, that or the other selfish reason. And then, when we do something of a similar nature, it is different. We tell ourselves that we have different—doubtless higher—motives. How do we know what the motives of the other fellow are? Perhaps he is just as high-minded as we are. It just looks different. We are too close to our own behavior to judge it accurately.

INDIANS

Secretary of the Interior Wilbur is setting up an educational program for the Indians. There are still many thousands of them. All we can do for them will be little enough—considering what we did to them years ago. Perhaps too much education may set them to thinking about their wrongs. At any rate, the Indians ought to have every chance that America has to offer. They belong to our first families.

What is the difference between shoe sizes in inches? In hosiery? The difference between sizes on a shoe for length is one-third of an inch. The difference in measurements between widths is one-quarter of an inch. On half sizes the difference would be one-half of the whole size. Size 8 in women's hosiery for example, measures from the top of the toe to the end of the heel when measured according to the standard method adopted by the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers. Each larger size is half an inch longer. Men's sizes are the same as women's in hosiery.

"I'm Alone" Case
What was the "I'm Alone" incident? The pursuit and sinking by one of our coast guard boats of the British schooner "I'm Alone" in the Gulf of Mexico in March, 1929, has developed into a matter of considerable national importance. The vessel was an admitted rum runner and was detected by the coast guard off the Louisiana coast on March 20, 1929, with a load of liquor. It is claimed by the United States that the schooner was within boarding distance from the shore, as specified in the British-American extraterritorial seizure convention of 1924. The vessel refused to heave to upon the demand of the coast guard, and was thereafter pursued for two days and finally sunk. The Canadian government took issue with the United States on the matter, and the case was referred to international arbitration, as provided in the treaty of 1924.

Indianapolis Speedway
Is the Indianapolis speedway made of brick or wooden blocks? What is the speed requirement for entrance in the race? The Indianapolis speedway is built of brick. The required speed to qualify varies each year. In 1929 the requirement was 85 miles an hour for four complete laps of the track.

Tunney-Muldoon Trophy
When was the Tunney-Muldoon trophy unveiled? The Tunney-Muldoon trophy, emblematic of the world's heavyweight championship, was unveiled with appropriate ceremony in Madison Square Garden on April 17, 1929, before 500 men well known in all walks of life.

The "Volunteer State"
Why is Tennessee called the "Volunteer State"? Tennessee won that name because in the Mexican war, during Polk's administration, the call for volunteers asked for 2,800 men from Tennessee and 30,000 responded.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

IN THE STICKS
NEW YORK CITY, New York — Speaking of the columnist racket: I was looking through some "exchanges" recently, and was struck by the high order of talent manifested day after day by the columnists out of town. The average New Yorker, if he thinks about it at all, rests secure in the belief that the Big Town has a monopoly on columnist headlines. That isn't true. As a matter of fact, slacked up against some of the scribe-eyed geniuses of the hinterland, the Manhattan aggregation takes on the tired and discouraged appearance of The Pastor's white pants the day after the Sabbath school picnic.

There's a freshness of viewpoint about the out-of-town man's stuff that the average New York scribbler knows nothing about. There's a virility of expression, a poise without impudence—a sure, reverential, smiling outlook on life; a sane and genial philosophy characterizing the work of those lads that the white, wan and weary flocks of the metropolis will never know—or, having once known and lost, will never more regain.

OFF BROADWAY
Life isn't all gin and sin and toddling off with someone's else wife, as some of the Local Brothers try to make you believe. The destiny of mankind doesn't hinge on the solution of the Prohibition question. The universe is not bounded by the Bowery on the south and Broadway on the north.

The world laughs and loves and yawns and sneezes and plays poker and supports the pastor. Some of us are shootin' golf and some are sawing wood. Somewhere the band is playing, kittens are chasing butterflies, babies are toddling across daisy-tudded lawns, and the gang down at the grocery are criticizing The President—all dripping with "human interest" and punch and appeal when squinted at from the right point on the circumference. When the columnist on this Wa-

MORE ON NAVAL TREATY ARGUMENT

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—How public pact contains a "joker" to find it. Slightly fretted, Secretary of State Stimson took the position that it is up to the senate to ratify or reject treaties; not to insist on a hand in making them. To which the senator countered with article 2, section 2, paragraph 2 of the constitution, empowering the president to make treaties "by and with the ADVICE," as well as the "consent of the senate."

Semi-acknowledging the cogency of this reasoning, the secretary finally did send to the committee the desired notes, indeed, but what he called a "paraphrase" of them—his general sense, in his own words. Still the senator was balky. What might seem to Secretary Stimson as excellent "paraphrase," he explained, might seem to him very faulty—maybe even with omissions in it.

The secretary dwelt on the private, personal nature of the original notes—notes, he argued, which it might be highly embarrassing to the American delegates' fellow negotiators, of other nationalities, to have him broadcast. He reminded Senator Johnson that President Washington once refused to let congress see the inside correspondence which preceded one of his pact—the Jay treaty.

Did not the senator consider President Washington's example a pretty good one to follow? asked Mr. Stimson.

The senator said "yes," he did; but pointed to an inaccuracy in the secretary's historical allusion—It is true that President Washington refused to send the Jay correspondence to the house of representatives, which has no voice in treaty-making; however, he sent it to the senate, which has.

Regardless of the merits of the debate between Secretary of State Stimson (really, of course, meaning President Hoover) and Senator Johnson of California, this much is fairly obvious—Diplomats never did like kibitzing.

Diplomatic kibitzing positively was forbidden in the middle ages; it has been risky until quite recently; it is frowned on now, and it seems unlikely that it ever will be popular among professional internationalists.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

PETER FOOLS WATER SCORPION

Peter felt sorry for poor Water Measurer, shivering and shaking on his bit of bark. "Stop worrying, Measurer, and I will show you a way of escape, do as I say. Hang tight onto that bit of bark and I will toss it far down the pool. I am pretty good at throwing and you will drop into the water again so far away from where Scorpion thinks you are that he'll not spy you. And when you are sure he is not lurking in the mud right beneath you, you will forget your fear, take to your legs and scuttle out the danger zone. How about it, fellow, do you think my scheme is good?"

"You bet I do!" Water Measurer almost upset himself in his enthusiasm. "I'll do as you say and take the only way out of Water Scorpion's jaws. But, throw me quickly or I shall lose what little courage I have and go overboard in the wrong spot. I am grateful, boy. You are saving my life, and who knows, perhaps some day I shall be able to help you out of a scrape."

It was plain to be seen that Water Measurer was growing more unsteady by the minute. Brown Beetle whispered to Peter that if the insect were to be saved from a sad fate Peter must act quickly. So Peter picked up the bit of bark to which Water Measurer was clinging with all of his six legs, and tossed it as far as he could down the pool. Scarcely had it dropped to the surface of the water before Measurer had leaped off and was making tracks for home and a place of safety as fast as he could go.

"Bully for you, boy. You certainly have a strong arm," remarked a strange voice close by. Peter, who by this time was quite used to being addressed unexpectedly, turned and found at his feet in the water a queer black object that looked like nothing so much as a round flat boat. The boat was moving slightly, rowed in some mysterious fashion back and forth, back and forth, getting nowhere. From this boat the voice roared.

Next: "The Boat with a Voice."

Eat Quota of Fruits

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"Dear Doctor: I have been Petersing for 18 months and have lost 74 pounds. When I began, I weighed 200, and am now down to 126. I am 5 ft. 3 in. tall. I can still be a good deal lighter, but I don't let that discourage me.

"I have noticed since dieting that I am troubled with gas and constipation. I eat a small bowl of bran in the morning and have taken agar, but these don't seem to help. Please tell me how I can overcome the gas and constipation. MISS B."

You certainly have had wonderful results in your reducing, Miss B. Backsliding once in a while seems to be inevitable, and it shouldn't worry.

Sometimes bran, sometimes agar may cause flatulence, or gas. Are you getting your full quota of vegetables and fruits daily? If you are, and are still constipated, I suggest you try a large tablespoonful of psyllium seeds once a day. This is taken in cold or hot water (allowing them to stand for a little while in it), or you can take it in your allowance of skim milk. Psyllium seed gruel is a good meal (if you're hungry!). Have you our article on Constipation? Send for that, for it will give you more suggestions.

Those who need the Petersizing pamphlet may have same by following column rules.

"Dear Doctor: My husband has been having a lot of trouble with heart-burn. He has had this for a long time, but it seems to be getting worse all the time. He has to take baking soda or milk of magnesia to get relief, which only lasts until he has his next meal, which means he takes baking soda at least three times a day. He smokes quite a bit. Neither one of us eats much meat, and use mostly whole wheat products. What would you advise him to do? MRS. J."

Heartburn is a symptom of excess hydrochloric acid in the stomach, and if this keeps up, it is frequently a forerunner of ulcer of the stomach. Mrs. J. I imagine your husband is an excessive eater of bread and other starchy foods, and both of you are probably on an unbalanced diet, containing an excessive amount of the acid-forming foods. You should eliminate a large part of the bread and cereals, and take potatoes instead. I suggest you send for the article on Balanced Diet. (See column rules.)

Smoking is also one of the causes of excess acidity, so your husband should break himself of the habit. (We have an article on the Tobacco Habit and Cure.)

Baking soda is harmless if it is taken only occasionally, but having to use it frequently shows that it does not at all get at the cause of the trouble. It does harm in masking symptoms, and postponing correct treatment, and probably, used too frequently, it upsets the chemistry of the body.

Mrs. W.: Our pamphlet on Kidney and Bladder Disorders contains the simple test for determining the presence of sugar in the urine. See column rules for obtaining this.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column in their turn. Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed stamped envelope, plus the following small charge to help cover cost of printing and handling: for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet, ten cents in coin. The pamphlets are Reducing and Gaining, Hygiene of Women, Kidney and Bladder Disorders, Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper. Write legibly, and not over 200 words.

Stick To Your Verdict

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

IT ALWAYS amazes me to see the stuff men get away with and expect the girl friend or wife to forgive and forget.

They themselves are not very forgiving. In fact, quite the opposite. They expect wife or girl friend to walk a chalk line. But not so themselves. They can drink, gamble, lie, be unfaithful, and they think it their right that the little woman meet them at the door with open arms and a face wreathed in smiles, congratulating herself that her man has come back to her, I suppose.

And their disgust is almost pathetic when they find that occasionally a girl does not take them back joyfully, but "bawls them out" and suggests that while she will forgive, she can never feel the same love and trust again.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been going with a certain boy for about 10 months, and for the last seven months we have been going steady. When I first met him I liked him real well, although I knew he drank. He promised me that he would quit drinking, and I know he kept this promise for a good while, but a few weeks ago he got drunk and ran around with other girls. He lied to me about this, and after I did learn the truth he confessed that he lied and asked me to forgive him.

"When he lied to me like this it just seemed to lower him in my estimation, so I told him I would forgive him, and I also told him that I would go with him, but not steady. He got angry and said that the only reason I wouldn't go with him was because he was out of a job and couldn't take me to dances, theaters, etc.

"Virginia Lee, what he said is not the reason I won't go steady with him, but I can't reason with him, and he won't come around and let me explain. He said that there is nothing to explain. What shall I do? Would it be all right for me to write him a letter and try to explain, or shall I wait for him to come to see me?"

BUBBLES.
My very strong conviction is, Bubbles, that he knows very well what your reason is for not going with him, and knows that it is all his own fault, but is too bad tempered to acknowledge it and win pardon by accepting your decision not to go steady with him until he has proved that he can behave.

Your verdict was wise and just. Stick to it. If he really cares for you in the right way he will come around after awhile and ask you for dates. If he doesn't, well, I hate to say it, and don't want to be hard and unreasonable, but I think you would be well rid of him. Chaps who go on those kind of sprees are not very satisfactory, either as boy friends or husbands. Couldn't you learn to be happy without him?

I wonder sometime, as I read the letters of those who write to me for advice, whether men and women love more lightly than they did in days of yore or whether in those times, when divorces were unheard of for common people, they merely suffered in silence when love was gone, knowing there was no release but death.

Says Hair Rinse Beneficial

By GLADYS GLAD

"Dear Miss Glad: The castor oil shampoo contained in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet has done wonders in promoting the growth and luxuriance of my hair. Many thanks. However, when I was very light, golden blonde. In the last few years, it has darkened considerably. A friend suggested that I use camomile tea rinse. I do not wish to use a bleach, will you please advise me as to how it is prepared?"

LILLIAN VI.
The camomile tea rinse does not contain bleaching properties. It is used primarily on blonde hair, because of its tonic effect, on sensitive scalps. It keeps the hair soft and glossy, and brings out the natural golden tint. To prepare this rinse, place a handful of camomile flower in a pint of water, and allow it to come to a boil. Then strain the mixture through cheese cloth, and add enough water to make a quart. Rinse the hair thoroughly with this solution.

"Dear Miss Glad: I happen to be one of those unfortunate who possess red noses. I can't quite understand the cause of it. Let me assure you that I am an absolute teetotaler. Can you suggest any remedy for this condition? Would a skin peel help?"

IDA MANN.
A red nose is usually caused by poor circulation. It can also be caused by stimulating drinks, and too highly-seasoned foods. I would advise you to modify your diet. Take deep-breathing exercises when you rise in the morning to stimulate the circulation of the body. Exercise vigorously in the fresh air. Also, you might massage your nose with a bit of nourishing cream. A skin peel might be of some assistance, but will not permanently eradicate the condition.

"Dear Miss Glad: I want to tell you of the excellent results I have achieved through following the gaining weight course contained in your booklet 'New Figure'." I have actually gained twelve pounds already! Thank you so much. My neck, however, is still a bit scrawny. Can you give me an exercise or two to correct this trouble?"

MRS. LANG.
The following exercises should be done morning and night. Do not do them too strenuously at first, as you will make the muscles sore.

Make a complete circle with the head, beginning by tilting the head forward as far as possible, then to the left, then back and then to the right. Do this exercise ten times.

Lie flat on the bed or floor. Raise the legs to a right angle with the torso. Do this exercise slowly. It is the best back and neck exercise.

Stand erect, shoulders held back, and take a long breath. Throw the head as far forward on the chest as possible ten times.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlet on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

FRAMED

Milburn, member of the Graham Paints team, who sometimes catches behind the bat and sometimes plays in the outfield, is the leading hitter of the National Softball League, averages compiled Thursday disclosed. Milburn has stepped to the plate seventeen times, has made ten hits and has scored eight runs for a mark of .588.

Lawrence Fuller, of the Lang Chevrolet Co., is close behind with an average of .565, having made thirteen hits in twenty-three times at bat. "Happy" Davis, also of Langs, is third with .560. He has made fourteen hits in twenty-five trips to the platter. Buell, of Langs, is technically the league's best hitter but he has only played in one game so Milburn is the actual leader.

Being in a statistical mood we delved into the averages and discovered some illuminating figures. Geysers has the highest team batting average of the six competing clubs, the mark being .375 for seven games. Nine members of the team are batting more than .300. The Lang Chevrolet Co. is next with an average of .371 for six games with eight of its members above .300. Next is Graham Paints with .337 and four players above .300, followed by the Carroll-Binder Co. with .305 and seven members of the team above .300. Criterion has a team mark of .241 and three players above .300 and the Downtown Country Club has the feeble mark of .239 with four players better than .300.

A total of seventy-nine players have played at various times as a member of National League teams so far this season and of this number thirty-five, almost half, are batting .300 or better. Seventeen are in the .300 class, twelve in the .400 group, and five in the .500 category while one has a .600 rating.

Paul Boxwell, pitcher for Geysers, who was the leading batter of the league last season, is now hitting at a "measly" .375 clip but will doubtless finish right up near the top at the close of the schedule.

Following is a list of all league players who were hitting .300 or better up to Thursday:

As was the case a year ago, Fred "Bulldog" Smith, of Geysers, has personally scored more runs than any other player. The third sacker has crossed the plate eighteen times although he has made only thirteen hits. N. Murrell, Geyer center fielder, has made the most hits, seventeen, but has taken part in seven games.

Interest in softball has spread to Jamestown, where a "kitten ball" team to be known as the Jamestown Softball Club, has been organized. The younger business men of the village compose the team, which had a scheduled opening game with the Criterion team of the Xenia National League Thursday night.

This organization has been awarded many gold medals for its concerts in the capitals of Europe. Sergei Sokoloff, the director, was formerly a famed Moscow leader. The Russians appeared in striking native costumes and their sang numbers reminiscent of the plaintive music of the rivers and steppes of the most vast empire in the world.

Miss Lura Forbes assisted in the evening entertainment. Miss Forbes, an exceptional artist, delighted the audience with her impersonations. She was not a reader but a clever actress and mimic.

Miss Forbes and the Russian chorus also entertained on the afternoon program Thursday.

LANGS TIE GEYERS FOR LEAD BY DEFEATING CARROLL - BINDERS

The Lang Chevrolet Co. softball team climbed back into a tie with Geysers for first place in the National League by overwhelming the Carroll-Binder Co., 21 to 5 Thursday night at Cox Athletic Field. Crippled by the absence of three regulars, Woolley, Dice and Cope, the Carroll-Binder nine offered only half-hearted opposition.

With every player hitting safely, Langs gathered twenty hits off the offerings of Jacobs, Carroll-Binder pitcher. All the Lang scoring came in four innings.

Bunching six hits with an error, Langs got away to a six-run lead in the first inning. Bell beat out a hit and D. Fuller knocked a synthetic home run. Consecutive singles by L. Fuller, Smittle and Patterson, a double by McCoy and an error followed.

Carroll-Binder retaliated with two runs in its half of the first on Foley's double, an error, a sacrifice fly by Randall and Leahy's two-bagger, and added three more in the second on four solid singles after two were out by Geyer, Foley, Cope and Randall in the order named.

After the second inning, Harry Williams, Lang hurler, settled down and whitewashed the opposition during the remaining seven rounds.

After the shaky start, Jacobs also pitched good ball in the next four innings but the blow-off came in the sixth when Langs again brought their heavy artillery into action and marked up five runs on a walk to D. Fuller, doubles by L. Fuller and Smittle, an error and a double by Patterson. A walk and two errors gave Langs two more tallies in the seventh.

In the ninth Langs put on a rally and scored eight runs. Thirteen batters faced Jacobs in this hectic stanza and eight of them hit safely.

Smittle and Patterson topped the Lang attack, each obtaining two singles and a double. Leahy smacked a brace of doubles and a single for the losers.

A double-header is scheduled for Friday night with Kiwanis-Rotary meeting Krippendorf at 6 o'clock in an American League game, after which Geysers will play an exhibition game with the Clinton Supply Co. team of Wilmington. Lineups:

GRAHAM PAINTS WIN FROM SPRINGFIELD

Playing with ten men on a side and using an unfamiliar inside seam ball, the Graham Paints of the Xenia National League scored a 17 to 12 victory over the First National Bank team of Springfield in an inter-city softball contest staged on the Ridgwood Field diamond at Springfield Thursday night. Lloyd Downey pitched for the Graham. A return game with the Reaper City nine will be played in Xenia within the next two weeks.

THREE GAMES WILL ENTERTAIN LEGION MEMBERS AT PICNIC

Two softball games and an amateur baseball game will feature the American Legion picnic for ex-service men and their families and friends Sunday afternoon and evening at Kill Kare Park on the Dayton Pike.

The American Legion junior baseball team sponsored by Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, will face the junior nine of the Osborn-Fairfield post at 2 o'clock, after which there will be a softball tilt between a Foody Post team and the Osborn-Fairfield post. At 6:30 o'clock Geysers, of the Xenia National League, will play a "kitten ball" game with Middletown Post, No. 218, American Legion.

The Middletown post has one of the classiest and hardest hitting softball teams in this section of the state and it will be recalled that the Middles defeated the former Harness nine twice last season.

Dancing will be enjoyed in the evening.

GRAHAM PAINTS WIN FROM SPRINGFIELD

Playing with ten men on a side and using an unfamiliar inside seam ball, the Graham Paints of the Xenia National League scored a 17 to 12 victory over the First National Bank team of Springfield in an inter-city softball contest staged on the Ridgwood Field diamond at Springfield Thursday night. Lloyd Downey pitched for the Graham. A return game with the Reaper City nine will be played in Xenia within the next two weeks.

RUSSIAN COSSACKS PLEASE CROWDS AT CHAUTAUQUA HERE

The Russian Cossack chorus, acclaimed as the greatest singing organization now touring the United States, composed largely of Russian noblemen driven out of their native country by the scourge of the Red revolution, was introduced on the fourth day of Chautauqua Thursday, presenting a gorgeous singing pageant in the evening.

This organization has been awarded many gold medals for its concerts in the capitals of Europe.

Sergei Sokoloff, the director, was formerly a famed Moscow leader.

The Russians appeared in striking native costumes and their sang numbers reminiscent of the plaintive music of the rivers and steppes of the most vast empire in the world.

Miss Lura Forbes assisted in the evening entertainment. Miss Forbes, an exceptional artist, delighted the audience with her impersonations. She was not a reader but a clever actress and mimic.

Miss Forbes and the Russian chorus also entertained on the afternoon program Thursday.

MERCHANTS PLAY BOWERSVILLE SUNDAY; TWIN BILL FOR FOURTH

Xenia Merchants will face the Bowersville Independents, one of the strongest semi-pro nines in Greene County, Sunday afternoon on the Washington Park diamond.

Manager Jess Chambliss announces the Merchants will play a double-header next Friday afternoon as a Fourth of July attraction, playing a twin bill with the H. and B. O-To Shoppe team of Dayton. Dick Wells, Bowersville southpaw, formerly with the Merchants, is now pitching for this Dayton nine and will undoubtedly be seen in action against his old mates.

On the following Sunday the Merchants will open a three-game series with the Grismer Fuels of Dayton. Several weeks ago the Grismer team outlasted the Merchants in a fifteen-inning struggle to achieve an 8 to 7 victory. The local team has not been beaten since, having won six out of seven games played to date.

Manager Chambliss also desires to have Guy McMichael communicate with him at the earliest possible date. McMichael is also a former hurler for the Xenia

THE CHURCH AND THE REPUBLIC

A political philosopher has said, "The religion of Christ has made a republic like ours possible; the more we have of this religion the better the republic. Christianity is the companion of liberty in all its conflicts — the cradle of its infancy and the divine source of its claims."

"Christianity is the basis of republican government, its bond of cohesion and its life-giving law. More than the Magna Charta itself, the Gospels are the roots of English liberty. That Magna Charta and the Petition of Rights, with our completing Declaration, was possible only because the Gospels had been before them."

The aim of the study of Bible biographies for the next six months is to discover the factors which determined their characters and to create an earnest desire and purpose to profit by their mistakes and to express in conduct and character their spirit and ideals so far as they were in keeping with those of Christ.

V. 1. "Now Jehovah said unto Abram, get thee out of thy country, and from my kindred, and from thy father's house unto the land that I will shew thee." Abram like our pilgrim fathers was seeking freedom to worship God. He became a pioneer in monotheism, the worship of only one God. A new religion was to be started and it was advantageous to start in a new country.

V. 2. "And I will make of thee a great nation and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and be thou a blessing." One makes a great venture for a great goal; faith in God is a venture; to live is a venture; to die is a venture; but satisfaction comes when God extends his promise of blessing.

V. 3. "And I will bless them that bless thee and him that curse thee I will curse; and in thee shall all the families of earth be blessed." Here is a principle that one must be a blessing to others in order that he may be blessed himself, and in failing to be a blessing to others, there is a danger of being a curse to others and the same is reflected back into the character of the individual who thus neglects his duty.

V. 4. "And there was a strife between the herdsmen of Abram's cattle and the herdsmen of Lot's cattle." Prosperity and wealth are sources of danger. Here lies the cause of wars between nations as well as individual quarrels.

V. 5. "And Abram said unto Lot, let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between thy herdsmen and my herdsmen; for we are brethren." Here is one essential step to avert trouble, to stop war—that of showing a brotherly spirit.

V. 6. "Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee from me; if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou take the right hand, then I will go to the left." An other commendable step to avert trouble is that of making concessions. So long as one holds out for his rights and his claims, little progress toward peace will be made.

V. 7. "And Lot lifted his eyes and beheld the plain of the Jordan that it was well watered everywhere." Lot's selfishness was seen in choosing the most fertile country; he did not take into account the evil associations in that country, who would be the means of influencing his family away from God.

V. 8. "So Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan." God allows each one the liberty of choosing for himself his own way of life; eternal destinies hang on individual choices.

V. 9. "Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan and Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain and moved his tents as far as Sodom." Abram moved right away from contented territory into the quiet of God's hills where he might have closer communion with God. Making God first was his first purpose.

Vs. 8, 9. "By faith Abraham when he was called, obeyed." By faith he became a sojourner in the land of promise. The Hebrew author makes Abraham an object of faith, an example for us to make the supreme venture of life regardless of barriers.

V. 10. "For he looked for the city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." The prospects of heaven ought to keep us steady and faithful.

1. Why was it necessary that Abraham be called out of Haran?
2. What was the price that Abraham had to pay to obey God's call?
3. What was the purpose of this call to Abraham?

4. What are the dangers of wealth and prosperity as taught in this lesson?
5. What magnanimous attitudes are seen in Abraham in his dealing with Lot?

6. What are some of the reasons that cause men to emigrate today?

7. Why is immigration in America restricted and by what Christian principles is such restriction justified?

Clericus says, "Progress always costs sacrifice and spiritual growth has ever called for the bravest service and the fullest devotion of heroic leaders and prophets and apostles."

Lesson prayer, "Help us to make thee, O God, our one and only God and to trust thee for the blessings of life, willing to pursue peace with all men at any cost."

WASHINGTON A PEACE MAKER
In 1754, Washington was stationed with his regiment at Alexandria, when there was a public election held. Washington favored a candidate with such strong acclamations as to anger one of his hangers favoring the opposing party and in his anger knocked Washington down with a hickory stick.

General Washington soon quelled his enraged troops who had bolted out from their barracks when they heard the disturbance, imploring them to do no violence out of respect to himself, thus avoiding what might have been a bloody skirmish.

The next day, Mr. Washington wrote a polite note to his offender, requesting him to come to his tavern; the invitation was interpreted as a challenge for a duel and the offender appeared well armed; to his surprise, however, he was met by General Washington with a friendly, outstretched hand.

"My friend," he said, "to err is nature; to rectify error is glory. I find I was wrong yesterday, but I wish to be right today. You have

HOW IMPRESS THE OBLIGATIONS OF CITIZENSHIP ON THE PEOPLE OF THE NATION?

Dr. Daniel Poling says, "There should be a systematic campaign on the part of patriotic societies, fraternal organizations and all departments of the church to educate and inspire the citizens and the future citizens as to the responsibilities and privileges of citizenship. In this work, editorials and news articles in papers and magazines, modern publicity methods, public meetings, study classes and city surveys should be employed. Such a campaign would have a great opportunity in the patriotic observance of the Fourth of July or of Election Day. 'Good Citizenship Day' should be made the platform for nation-wide agitation against criminal neglect of the suffrage. Another has described America as 'a republic in which all men are sovereigns but in which no man cares to wear a crown.' The crown of American sovereignty is the ballot and every otherwise worthy citizen who fails to wear his crown denies his kingship and endangers his kingdom."

RADIO SHOWMANSHIP

That's Secret Of Success Of Olga Serlis, Who Follows Trend Of Damrosch

NOTE: This is another of a series of radio performances.

By YANNER ALEXANDER
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, June 27.—Olga Serlis, petite, dark, vivacious and startlingly feminine is a far cry from the robustly Teutonic Walter Damrosch.

Yet the radio fans' linking of her name with that of the maestro as the favorites of the lovers of good music is the most appreciated accolade so far bestowed upon this young veteran of the air.

Since she founded the Parnassus Trio six years ago, the pianist-directress of that group, not to speak of the "Three Little Maids" and "The Melody Three," has striven consistently to do two things in particular. First, to spread her own love of the great music of the world and, second, to spread it with an ever improving technique.

Olga Guiding Spirit

The other two members of the group—the personnel is constant—are Genevieve Hughes, cellist, and Grace Fischer, violinist. Olga, however, evidently is the soul and guiding spirit. The other girls are competent performers who fulfill the Serlis' conceptions.

Although born in Chicago, Olga was brought up in the atmosphere of classic music—rather than classic gun fighting. Her early training at the excellent Conservatory of Music of the Illinois city was followed by a successful debut on the concert stage when she was nine years old.

Since then, however, she has known only the broadcasting studios and the practice rooms. One season as a child prodigy was enough.

The Hutchison & Gibney Co.

putting on the RITZ

They're putting it on, and no mistake, these wise young women with a nose for the new. Ever since the RITZ appeared in our corner department, they've been putting it on—and keeping it on.

The RITZ, you know, is the brand new Nemo-flex foundation—soft, light, flexible—yet really molding (for in spite of its lightness it DOESN'T stretch but retains its shape!)

It's no more obtrusive under your frock than your skin—and here is some news we've saved till last—THE GARTERS ARE INVISIBLE!

They are a Nemo-flex development—made of small strands of round elastic with so much stretch that you'll forget all about garter runs. Then there's no buckle to show through your frock or to be sat on.

Add these garters to all its other features—its flexibility, its molding qualities, the fact that both garters and shoulder straps are detachable (making it as easily laundered as lingerie)—and we're pretty sure that once you see it, you too will be PUTTING ON THE RITZ.

The Hutchison & Gibney Co.

the gradations which separate coldly formal "chamber music" from graceful, lyric and occasionally thrilling compositions for piano, violin and viola. If a critic calls the latter "chamber music," it still doesn't offend former jazz hounds who don't read musical criticism but do write in to the chain studios applauding Miss Serlis and her efforts.

Reaction

What with the three programs every day, and the many times three rehearsals which are a necessary preparation, Olga finds her time for recreation crowded. The varied list includes books and the theater for mental relaxation; however, swimming and tennis are the physical aids to well being which give her most pleasure.

Her greatest enjoyment, though, is being compared with Walter Damrosch. The next time you send in an applause card compare her with Walter Damrosch and be certain of making the day of a very attractive and clever young woman just a little brighter.

There will be a moonlight picnic on the lawn of the Third Baptist Church, Saturday evening.

There will be a lawn fete Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Finch, 165 Lexington Ave. Zion, Third and Middle Run Baptist Churches, St. John's and First A. M. E. Churches and E. Main St. Christian Church, together with Holy Trinity Church at Wilberforce are sponsoring a union picnic for the Sunday Schools of those churches to be held on the campus at Wilberforce Wednesday, July 3. It is the desire of these churches that the two communities shall turn out en masse as nearly as possible and have a genuine get-together outing. It is hoped that this day shall be observed annually as a holiday for the Christian workers of this community and Wilberforce. The Rev. W. C. Allen of Washington, C. H., formerly of Xenia, will be the orator. Many out-of-door amusements will be featured.

ATTENDANCE DAY IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Greene County Sunday Schools will celebrate annual "Attendance Day" in all churches in the county next Sunday.

H. E. Bales, Paintersville, president of the Greene County Council of Religious Education, is reminding Greene County Sunday Schools of the annual occasion, which will be observed in all Sunday Schools in the county.

ECZEMA ON ARM Skin Now Well GIVES CREDIT TO Resinol

"My daughter suffered from a form of eczema which caused a mass of blisters to form on her arm. As these blisters broke the trouble spread. The doctor was treating her, but she did not seem to be improving very fast. I heard of Resinol Ointment and asked the doctor about it. When he said it was all right, I tried it and want to tell you that after using three small jars, my daughter's arm was quite well."

ALL YOUR VACATION DREAMS

COME TRUE AT GROVE PARK INN

Vigorous sport, sweet tranquility and numberless pleasures in between will match your fleeting moods at Grove Park Inn . . . up, cool, in the Land of the Sky. Dreamed-about golf awaits you on your own front lawn, the Asheville Country Club course. Well-kept courts invite you to slashing sets of tennis. Fifteen crystal-clear lakes nestle nearby for swimming and canoeing. Guides will point out haunts of fighting rainbow trout in Pisgah National Forest. Afoot, astride, or by any one of a hundred concrete ribbon motor routes you may drink in the glories of these mile-high mountains, older than the Alps and ablaze with bloom. The Great Smokies and Nantahala Gorge, Hickory Nut Gap and Chimney Rock, Little Switzerland and Mt. Mitchell—any highway you choose unfolds new vistas of incomparable splendor. Biltmore Chateau, treasure house of the Vanderbilts, is open to your gaze. Smart social life among brilliant companions adds zest to this adventure in life at its best. Rest, absolute and undisturbed, likewise finds a truer meaning here. Unwelcome noises never reach you, far from clattering streets. A staff trained to the letter administers every luxurious comfort. Hospitality reaches its zenith, but never intrudes. The cuisine is unsurpassed. Nights are always cool . . . blankets are welcome as you slip away to rest between sheets of Oxford will, your head on a pillow of purest down—to dream of another day of kaleidoscopic joy. The Inn is open throughout the year. American Plan. Reservations are desired in advance.

BRINGING UP FATHER

The Theater

"The Well of Loneliness," Radcliffe Hall's celebrated novel, will be dramatized and produced in English on the stage in Paris in the near future, it is announced.

Willette Kershaw, American actress, who produced and starred in "Maya," the play banned in New York, in Paris last year, will produce the stage version of the Hall novel.

The dramatization is announced to have been made by a famous dramatist whose name is to be kept secret until the play has been seen by the public.

Anyone who has read "The Well of Loneliness" will at once be struck by the obvious difficulty of dramatizing the novel and producing it on the stage, without either making an innane and weak parody of the book or producing something too offensive for the consumption of the usual run of playgoers.

The novelist, whether Miss or Mrs., your correspondent does not know, has written her story beautifully, treating her delicate subject with a sympathy and understanding that makes it hard to believe that it was barred in England. Her novel also served to gain a respectful hearing and, in many cases, a sympathetic reaction among readers for the unfortunate of whom she writes. Obviously a stage treatment must be so delicate that it may suffer from lack of action.

They haven't been able to coax George M. Cohan back to the screen but the movies have captured his daughter, Helen, 17, who has been signed by Fox to play Will Rogers' daughter in "Lightnin'."

Henry King, the director, is enthusiastic over this offering of the "song and dance man." She is a red-head and is said to photograph mightily pretty. There's still some confusion over whether "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court" or "Lightnin'" will be Rogers' next talkie, with the balance swinging toward the latter.

Incidentally Will got $12,500 a week for his theater appearances in Boston, which isn't his record as he was paid $15,000 for fifteen minutes over the radio.

Twenty Years '10- Ago -'30

Dr. Austin M. Patterson will leave July 4 with other delegates to attend the convention of the National Chemical Association at San Francisco, Calif.

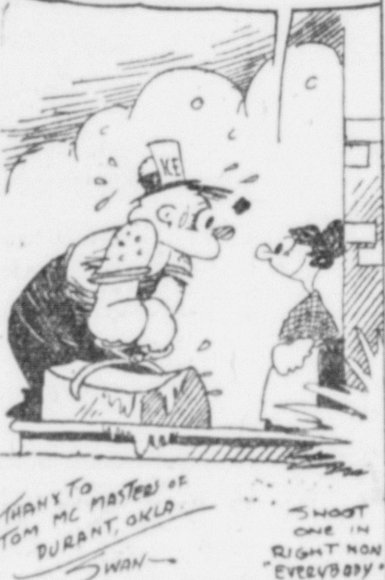

George Horen, a young boy who sings in the choir at Christ Episcopal Church, was overcome by heat while in church Sunday.

A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Siefert, of the Wilmington Pike.

Mr. W. R. Bushaw, Dayton, who has been employed at the Sayre and Hemphill's drug store, as a pharmacist, has resigned and Mr. Harry Sohn, of Greenfield, will fill the vacancy.

Carol's Return Revives Hopes of Banished Royalty

Deposed Monarchs See in Return of Roumanian Ruler Realization of Imperialistic Dreams

EX. KING GEORGE. GRAND DUKE CYRIL. EX. KAISER WILHELM

The wild acclaim that greeted King Carol's recent seizure of the Roumanian crown has revived the long-dead hopes of several other deposed and exiled European monarchs.

Ex-Empress Zita of Austria-Hungary, her son, Crown Prince Otto; Grand Duke Cyril of Russia; ex-Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany and ex-King George of Greece all pretend to see in Carol's triumph the turn in the tide of public opinion against autocratic rulers.

The energetic Zita, who has never relaxed her efforts to restore her seventeen-year-old son to the Hapsburg throne in Hungary, from her haven in Brussels, is expected to direct the attempt for a similar Hungarian regal coup in Grand Duke has been plotting with royalists for a revival of the ancient glory of the Romanoffs.

Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, most imperialistic of all ex-rulers and the man whose dream of world supremacy resulted in the death of millions, is another exile whose eyes shine with joy as he hears the good news from Bucharest.

More than a decade has passed since Wilhelm fled from Berlin to Doorn, Holland, but dreams of men like Wilhelm die hard.

Any visitor to Germany will tell you that despite its Republican form of government, the Teutonic empire is still in many ways an imperialistic nation. However, returning the Kaiser to his pre-war power would be another matter.

Besides the fierce German opposition, the consent of France, England and the other Allies would have to be obtained.

Ex-King George of Greece, is still another unhappy blue-blooded exile. About six or seven years ago George was swept off his Athens throne by the rising force of Republicanism.

He had been crowned only two years previously after marrying Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the late King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Roumania.

George and Elizabeth spend most of their time in England while Premier Venizelos runs the nation that once belonged to George by right of birth.
